

Strategic Indigenous Housing and Infrastructure Program (SIHIP)

HOW TO GET INVOLVED

What is SIHIP?

The Strategic Indigenous Housing and Infrastructure Program (SIHIP) is the largest Indigenous housing program undertaken by the Australian and Northern Territory Governments.

This joint $672 million housing program will deliver 750 new houses, 230 rebuilds of existing houses and 2500 refurbishments across 73 remote Indigenous communities and a number of community living areas (town camps) in the Northern Territory by 2013.

Three construction company consortia known as alliances have been engaged to deliver the program. The alliances are working closely with communities and government to deliver better housing for Indigenous Australians in the NT.

A target of 20 per cent has been set for Indigenous employment across the program. Alliances are also looking to sub contract and use local companies that can provide services at a competitive cost, placing a priority on the use of local Indigenous companies.

What type of work is needed on SIHIP?

Alliances will look to sub contract local providers or employ local people for a range of work or services which may include:

- electrical
- construction
- carpentry
- catering
- mentoring and training
- operating plant
- painting
- general labour
- landscaping and gardening
- administration

How can my business get involved?

Northern Territory businesses and Indigenous enterprises can get involved by registering with the Northern Territory Industry Capability Network (NTICN).

The NTICN provides an access point for alliances wanting to source contractors for work with SIHIP. To register on the NTICN Database, visit www.sihip.icn.org.au
