

Strategic Indigenous Housing and Infrastructure Program (SIHIP)

ALLIANCES

An alliance is formed when organisations work together in partnership to deliver a project.

The SIHIP alliance model of business working together with governments and the community heralds a new approach for government in delivering major housing works in the Northern Territory.

Three construction company consortia known as alliances have been engaged to deliver the program.

The three alliances are:

Earth Connect Alliance

- Canstruct
- Worley Parsons Services
- Force 10 International
- Greene & Associates
- Ostwald Brothers

New Future Alliance

- Leighton Contractors
- Broad Construction Services
- Opus Qantec McWilliam
- Ngarda Civil and Mining

Territory Alliance

- Sitzler Pty Ltd
- Laing O'Rourke Construction Pty Ltd
- McMahon Services
- ESS Compass Group

Strategic Indigenous Housing and Infrastructure Program (SIHIP)

Key features

Each alliance will design and construct housing works packages with an emphasis on building durable houses at a reasonable cost. Specific targets for employment and training of Indigenous people will be negotiated with performance-related financial incentives and penalties.

A target of 20 per cent has been set for Indigenous employment across the program. Alliances are also looking to sub contract and use local companies that can provide services at a competitive cost, placing a priority on the use of local Indigenous companies.

Can small businesses get involved?

Northern Territory businesses and Indigenous enterprises can get involved by registering with the Northern Territory Industry Capability

Network (NTICN). The NTICN provides an access point for alliances wanting to source contractors for work with SIHIP. To register on the NTICN Database, visit www.sihp.icn.org.au

Where can I get more information?
